

Let's Color with Red

To Parents: This activity is about color recognition. It is okay if your child colors outside of the white shapes. It is more important that he or she selects the right color.

Color the white shapes with matching colors.

Let's Color the Chick and the Banana

To Parents: While your child is coloring, it is okay if he or she goes outside the white area. It is more important that he or she selects the right color. After your child finishes coloring, ask him or her to name the objects. This will enhance recognition skills.

Color the white shapes with matching colors.

Let's Color the Dog

To Parents: Before your child begins coloring, make sure she or he understands that there are two animals below and that she or he should color only one of them. This activity is good practice for matching a word with the object it refers to.

Color only the dog using any colors you like.

Let's Color the Shirts

To Parents: Coloring exercises like this help your child hone color-recognition and fine motor skills.

• Example •

Finish coloring the shirts in matching colors.
